PROFESSIONAL GOALS:

As result of my professional and educational experiences, I am interested in positions where I can use my administrative experience while still maintaining my interest in teaching and research. I am interested in teaching undergraduate and graduate level courses in organizational and group communication. This could include basic courses, general survey courses, and seminars focusing on the assimilation process, people in transition, decision-making, and leadership. I conduct research concerning group and organizational members involved in change.

ACADEMIC INTERESTS FOR TEACHING AND RESEARCH:

Organizational Communication: assimilation, transitions, emotions, superior/subordinate communication, IRBs
Group Communication: decision making, leadership, role negotiation, dialectical theory, volunteers

DISSERTATION:

A Longitudinal Study of the Effects of Communication on the Intraorganizational Job Transfer (1991). This three phase study included quantitative questionnaires and qualitative interviews that examined disengaging from the old location, and role negotiation, social support, feedback, and relationship development at the new location.
